Expandable Teams: Some games (such as Sin City Slayer) may have expandable players. This is denoted in the description, the product details and the character list. This means a specified player(s) is designed to have an optional team with them during the game. It's as if you were invited to a party and decided to bring along your friends/colleagues. What would you speak to the other guests about if you attended a party with your friend? You'd have the mutual acquaintance in common, so that's what you'd talk about! In other words, if the character is a tabloid reporter, they can have a team of up to ~15-20 tabloid crew members with them. The expandable team's cards will have the information/clues of their lead player and that is what they use to play with in the game. The expandable players all have duplicate cards, but are in the game just like everybody else otherwise. This is a great way to host large events and still give everyone a role in the game. If you are hosting a party for 100-200 people, you would not want 100-200 story lines to sift through once the mystery occurs. That's a nightmare. This enables you to grow your guest list without adding chaos to your game.
